

The Global-Local Interface and Hybridity

Full details of all our publications can be found on <http://www.multilingual-matters.com>, or by writing to Multilingual Matters, St Nicholas House, 31–34 High Street, Bristol BS1 2AW, UK.

The Global-Local Interface and Hybridity

Exploring Language and Identity

Edited by

Rani Rubdy and Lubna Alsagoff

MULTILINGUAL MATTERS

Bristol • Buffalo • Toronto

Library of Congress Cataloging in Publication Data

The Global-Local Interface and Hybridity: Exploring Language and Identity/Edited by Rani Rubdy and Lubna Alsagoff.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

1. English language—Globalization. 2. English language—Foreign countries. 3. English language—Study and teaching—Foreign speakers. 4. English language—Standardization. I. Rubdy, Rani, editor of compilation. II. Lubna Alsagoff, editor of compilation.

PE1073.G56 2013

420—dc23 2013023706

British Library Cataloguing in Publication Data

A catalogue entry for this book is available from the British Library.

ISBN-13: 978-1-78309-085-3 (hbk)

ISBN-13: 978-1-78309-084-6 (pbk)

Multilingual Matters

UK: St Nicholas House, 31–34 High Street, Bristol BS1 2AW, UK.

USA: UTP, 2250 Military Road, Tonawanda, NY 14150, USA.

Canada: UTP, 5201 Dufferin Street, North York, Ontario M3H 5T8, Canada.

Copyright © 2014 Rani Rubdy, Lubna Alsagoff and the authors of individual chapters.

All rights reserved. No part of this work may be reproduced in any form or by any means without permission in writing from the publisher.

The policy of Multilingual Matters/Channel View Publications is to use papers that are natural, renewable and recyclable products, made from wood grown in sustainable forests. In the manufacturing process of our books, and to further support our policy, preference is given to printers that have FSC and PEFC Chain of Custody certification. The FSC and/or PEFC logos will appear on those books where full certification has been granted to the printer concerned.

Typeset by Techset Composition India (P) Ltd., Bangalore and Chennai, India.

Printed and bound in Great Britain by TJ International Ltd.

Contents

Contributors	xi
1 The Cultural Dynamics of Globalization: Problematizing Hybridity	1
Rani Rubdy and Lubna Alsagoff
Introduction	1
Globalization and Culture: Three Paradigms	4
The Local in the Global, the Global in the Local	5
The Production of Locality and Hybridized Cultural Identities	7
Theorizing Hybridity	8
Concluding Remarks	10
Part 1: Interrogating the Canon
2 When Scapes Collide: Reterritorializing English in East Africa	17
Christina Higgins
Scapes and Linguistic Flows	17
English as Separate	20
Looking Underneath Language	22
Hip Hop Intersects with Politics in Kenya	25
Hip Hop Intersects with Politics in Tanzania	27
Hip Hop Intersects with HIV/AIDS Education in Tanzania	29
Conclusion	40
3 Hybridity in the Linguistic Landscape: Democratizing English in India	43
Rani Rubdy
Introduction	43
Conceptual Framework	44

	Methodology and Research Context	46
	Constructing Locality in the Linguistic Landscape	48
	Conclusion	63
4	(Un)Emancipatory Hybridity: Selling English in an Unequal World Beatriz P. Lorente and T. Ruanni F. Tupas	66
	Introduction	66
	Hybridity at a Glance	68
	The Linguistics of the Hybrid	69
	The Purpose of the Chapter	71
	The Philippines as an EFL Destination	73
	The Website and Its Hybrid Discursive Marketing Strategies	74
	Conclusion: Hybridity and Global Capitalism	78
5	Unremarkable Hybridities and Metrolingual Practices Emi Otsuji and Alastair Pennycook	83
	Hybridity as Unmarked	83
	From Multilingualism to Metrolingualism	85
	Hybridity and Metrolingualism	91
	Conclusion: Unmarked Metrolingualism	97
6	Countering the Dual: Transglossia, Dynamic Bilingualism and Translanguaging in Education Ofelia García	100
	From Bilingual to Dual: The US Case	101
	The Promise of 'Dual Language' Unfulfilled	105
	Transgressing the Duality of Diglossia and Additive/ Subtractive Bilingualism: The Power of Transglossia and Dynamic Bilingualism	106
	Countering the Duality of L1/L2 Pedagogies: Translanguaging as Pedagogy	112
	Conclusion	115
Part 2: Hybridized Discourses of Identity in the Media
7	Reading Gender in Indian Newspapers: Global, Local or Liminal? Rakesh M. Bhatt	121
	Introduction	121
	Theoretical Background	122
	Data and Research Context	123

Data Analysis	124
Conclusion	131
8 Linguistic and Cultural Hybridity in French Web Advertising	133
Elizabeth Martin
Introduction	133
Theoretical Approaches to Hybridity	134
Methodology	138
Results and Discussion	140
Conclusion	149
9 What's Punjabi Doing in an English Film? Bollywood's New Transnational Tribes	153
Anjali Gera Roy
Contemporary Indian Film Industry: Local and Global Crossover Punjabiyyat : A Look at Three Crossover Films and the Hybrid Use of Language	153
The Punjabi Unsayable	154
Singing and Dancing the Unsayable	157
Haptic Visuality Conveying Punjabiyyat	159
Fetish Objects: Embodying Cultural Memories	161
Conclusion	164
10 Hybridizing Medialect and Entertaining TV: Changing Korean Reality	170
Jamie Shinhee Lee
Changing Linguistic Reality on Korean TV	170
Globalization, English and TV Celebrities	173
Discussion	174
Conclusion	186

Part 3: Multilingual Diaspora and the Internet

11 The Language of Malaysian and Indonesian Users of Social Networks: Practice vs System	191
Mario Saraceni
Setting the Theoretical Scene	191
Textual Data	195
Interview Data	199
Conclusions	202

12	Constructing Local and Global in the E-Borderland Tope Omoniyi	205
	Introduction	205
	Defining the E-Borderland	207
	Conceptualizing Local and Global in E-Borderlands	209
	Hybridity	211
	E-Borderlands and the English Language	212
	The Data	213
	Constructing the Local	214
	Constructing the Global	221
	Conclusion	222
13	Facebook, Linguistic Identity and Hybridity in Singapore Vincent B.Y. Ooi and Peter K.W. Tan	225
	Introduction and Theoretical Overview	225
	Networked Sociality and (Linguistic) Hybridity	227
	Singapore(an) English	228
	The Identity Contextualization Processes – Concentric Circles Model	230
	Data Examples	234
	Conclusion	242
 Part 4: Performing Hybrid Cultural Identities
14	Contested and Celebrated Glocal Hybrid Identities of Mixed-Ethnic Girls in Japan Laurel D. Kamada	247
	Global-Local Interface: Linguistic Capital and Hybrid Identities	248
	The Participants and Methodology	249
	Hybrid Identity: Unmelted Pot of ‘Floating Chunks’	251
	Glocal Language Choice and Identity	254
	Contesting Being ‘The English-Knowing Bilinguals’	258
	Intercultural Capital and Cultural Mixing	259
	Conclusion and Discussion	262
15	Singlish and Hybridity: The Dialogic of Outer-Circle Teacher Identities Lubna Alsagoff	265
	Introduction	265
	Globalization, Hybridity and Identity	266

Examining Teacher Identity	268
Hybridity and Teacher Identity	275
Concluding Remarks	278
16 Enacting Hybridity in the Philippine Diaspora	282
Corazon D. Villareal
Introduction	282
The Philippine Diaspora: An Overview	282
Hybridity Studies: The Critical Edge	283
A Question of Method	284
Manila to Kathmandu: Contemplating Hybridity	286
Interactive Hybridity	292
Suspended Hybridity?	294
Conclusion: Enacting Hybridity in Linguistic Studies	295
17 Reframing the Global-Local Dialectic and Hybridized
Textual Practices	300
Rani Rubdy and Lubna Alsagoff
Introduction	300
The Deterritorialization of Global Cultural Practices and Discourses	301
Hybridity as 'Boundary-Subverting', as 'Third Space'	302
Languages and Cultures as Discrete Forms
or Continua?	304
Hybridity Co-opted by Capitalistic Interests
or Turned to Local Advantage?	306
Performing Hybrid Cultural Identity	307
Hybridity's Capacity to Counter Social Inequality	310
Concluding Remarks	312
Author Index	315
Subject Index	321

Contributors

Lubna Alsagoff is Associate Dean, Office of Education Research, at the National Institute of Education, Nanyang Technological University (Singapore). Her research interests reside within the context of language teacher education and include investigating English as a local-global language, with a particular focus on grammar as a means of investigating the relation between language practice and identity. She is co-editor (with McKay, Hu and Renandya) of Principles and Practices for Teaching English in an International Language (Routledge, 2012), and has authored and edited books and contributed numerous journal articles and book chapters on these topics.

Rakesh M. Bhatt is Professor of sociolinguistics in the Department of Linguistics at the University of Illinois. He specializes in sociolinguistics of language contact, in particular, issues of migration, minorities and multilingualism, code-switching, language ideology and world Englishes. He has authored/co-authored two books, and is the author of essays in the Journal of Sociolinguistics, Annual Review of Anthropology, International Journal of the Sociology of Language, International Journal of Applied Linguistics, Lingua, World Englishes, Studies in Second Language Acquisition, Second Language Research, English Language and Linguistics and other venues. He is working on a book-length manuscript, under contract with Cambridge University Press, on the sociolinguistic patterns of subordination of Kashmiri language in diaspora.

Ofelia García is Professor in the PhD programs of urban education and of Hispanic and Luso-Brazilian literatures and languages at The Graduate Center, City University of New York. She has been Professor at Columbia University's Teachers College and Dean of the School of Education at Long Island University. Among her recent books are: Bilingual Education in the 21st Century; Bilingual Community Education and Multilingualism (with Zakharia & Otcu); Handbook of Language and Ethnic Identity, I & II (with J.A. Fishman); Educating Emergent Bilinguals (with Kleifgen) and Additive Schooling in Subtractive Times (with Bartlett). She is the Associate General Editor of the International Journal of the Sociology of Language.

Christina Higgins is a sociolinguist whose research explores the relationship between language and identity with reference to local and global forces, resources and affiliations. In East Africa she has researched code-switching in the workplace, the intersection of popular culture and multilingualism, and HIV/AIDS education. She is the author of English as a Local Language: Post-Colonial Identities and Multilingual Practices (Multilingual Matters, 2009), co-editor (with Bonny Norton) of Language and HIV/AIDS (Multilingual Matters, 2010) and editor of Identity Formation in Globalizing Contexts: Language Learning in the New Millennium (Mouton de Gruyter, 2011).

Laurel D. Kamada is a Lecturer at Tohoku University in Japan. Her publications are in bilingualism and multiculturalism in Japan, gender and ethnic studies, marginalized (hybrid and gendered) identities in Japan, and discourses of ethnic embodiment and masculinity. Her other interests include discourse analytic approaches to the examination of identity. Her most recent book is Hybrid Identities and Adolescent Girls: Being 'Half' in Japan (Multilingual Matters, 2010).

Beatriz P. Lorente is a Lecturer in English linguistics at the Department of English at the University of Basel (Switzerland). She has a PhD in language studies from the National University of Singapore. She has conducted and published research on the role of language in transnational labor migration, especially in relation to the Philippines. She is currently working on a book manuscript entitled Scripts of Servitude: Language and Transnational Domestic Work, which will be published by Multilingual Matters.

Elizabeth Martin is Associate Professor of French at California State University, San Bernardino, where she teaches courses in business French, French advertising, commercial and technical French translation, and francophone business cultures through case studies. Her publications include a book on English in French advertising (Palgrave Macmillan) plus articles, book chapters and reviews on topics in sociolinguistics, advertising and languages for the professions. Her current research interests focus on language policy, code-mixed advertising, multilingual web localization and intercultural business communication.

Tope Omoniyi is Professor and Chair of Sociolinguistics at the University of Roehampton in London. His research interest is in language and identity broadly and narrowly conceptualized. He has explored it in the context of language-in-education, language policy and planning, physical and conceptual borderlands, popular culture, nation, religion and world Englishes. He is the Director of the Centre for Research in English Language and Linguistics (CRELL). He is a leading scholar in the new interdisciplinary field known as the sociology of language and religion. His publications which traverse these subjects have appeared in reputable academic journals.

Vincent B.Y. Ooi is an Assistant Dean at the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences and Associate Professor at the Department of English Language and Literature, National University of Singapore. His research interests include computer-mediated communication, Asian discourses in English, the theory and practice of the lexicon, and corpus-based language studies. He is the author of Computer Corpus Lexicography (Edinburgh University Press, 1998), the editor of Evolving Identities: The English Language in Singapore and Malaysia (Times Academic Press, 2001), and the first lead editor of Perspectives in Lexicography: Asia and Beyond (K. Dictionaries, 2009). His articles have appeared in Oxford University Press, Routledge, John Benjamins, Rodopi, and IGI Global.

Emi Otsuji is a Senior Lecturer at the University of Technology, Sydney. Her research interests are: (1) language and globalization (metrolingualism and multilingualism), (2) performativity in language, culture and identity, (3) critical discourse analysis and (4) critical pedagogy in language teaching. She explores language use in contemporary urban environments that seek to move away from ascriptions of language and identity along conventional statist correlations between nation, language and ethnicity. Instead her studies favor an interest in how boundaries and distinctions are the results of particular language ideologies, and how language and space are managed and constructed through local interactions.

Alastair Pennycook is Professor of Language Studies at the University of Technology Sydney. His best known work has been on the global spread of English (The Cultural Politics of English as an International Language, Longman, 1994; English and the Discourses of Colonialism, Routledge, 1998; Global Englishes and Transcultural Flows, Routledge, 2007) and critical applied linguistics (Critical Applied Linguistics: A Critical Introduction, Lawrence Erlbaum 2001). His most recent research has focused on language practices, mobility and multilingualism (Language as a Local Practice, Routledge, 2010; Language and Mobility: Unexpected Places, Multilingual Matters, 2012).

Anjali Gera Roy is Professor in the Department of Humanities of Social Sciences at the Indian Institute of Technology Kharagpur. She has published several essays in literary, film and cultural studies. Her publications include a co-edited volume (with Nandi Bhatia) Partitioned Lives: Narratives of Home, Displacement and Resettlement (Pearson Longman, 2008) and a monograph Bhangra Moves: From Ludhiana to London and Beyond (Aldershot: Ashgate 2010). She has recently co-edited (with Chua Beng Huat) an anthology The Travels of Indian Cinema: From Bombay to LA (OUP, 2012) and edited Magic of Bollywood: At Home and Abroad (Sage, 2012).

Rani Rubdy is Associate Professor at the National Institute of Education, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore. Her research interests are in world Englishes, globalization and its social, sociolinguistic and educational consequences, transculturality and language planning and policy. Her publications include the co-edited volumes: English in the World: Global Roles, Global Roles (Continuum, 2006) with Mario Saraceni, Language as Commodity: Global Structures, Local Marketplaces (Continuum, 2008) with Peter K.W. Tan and Asian Englishes: Changing Perspectives in a Globalised World (Pearson, 2011) with Lawrence Jun Zhang and Lubna Alsagoff.

Mario Saraceni is a Senior Lecturer in English language and linguistics at the University of Portsmouth. His main academic interest is in the roles and the representations of English in the world. He wrote The Relocation of English (Palgrave, 2010) and, with Rani Rubdy, co-edited the volume English in the World: Global Rule, Global Roles (Continuum, 2006). He is now working on a book on world Englishes, to be published by Bloomsbury in 2014.

Peter K.W. Tan is Senior Lecturer in the Department of English Language and Literature at the National University of Singapore. His research interests include the development of Non-Anglo Englishes in South-East Asia, including their literary and computer-mediated forms and how they have influenced naming conventions. He is author of the book A Stylistics of Drama and has articles in journals (Language Problems and Language Planning; Names: A Journal of Onomastics; Onoma: Journal of the International Council of Onomastic Sciences; World Englishes; English Today and others), and chapters in various books.

T. Ruanni F. Tupas is an Assistant Professor of sociolinguistics at the National Institute of Education, Singapore. His research interests are in the interfaces between sociolinguistics and education, especially the politics of language in education in South-East Asia. From 2009–2012, he was Co-Director (with K.C. Lee) of a SGD$485,000 capability building curriculum development project funded by Temasek Foundation for selected tertiary institutions in Singapore, Indonesia, Vietnam and the Philippines. He was the 2009 Andrew Gonzalez Distinguished Professorial Chair in Linguistics and Language Education, awarded by the Linguistic Society of the Philippines (LSP) which recently has also elevated him to honorary membership.

Corazon D. Villareal is Professor at the Department of English and Comparative Literature, University of the Philippines Diliman. Her main publications are on translation and translational processes relating to Philippine literature and culture, among them, Translating the Sugilanon: Reframing the Sign (University of the Philippines Press, 1994), Siday (Ateneo de Manila University Press, 1997) and 'Translating Folklore in the Philippines' in Micaela Wolf (ed.) Übersetzen: Translating, Traduire: Towards a Social Turn? (Lit Verlag, 2006). She was Fulbright Research Fellow at Columbia University (2006) and Associate at the Nida School of International Studies in Misano, Italy (2010).

1 The Cultural Dynamics of Globalization: Problematizing Hybridity

Rani Rubdy and Lubna Alsagoff

Introduction

Globalization is not just one of the most hotly debated concepts this century; it has become a social reality of contemporary importance – ‘both as a social mode that we need to keep probing and as a focus for some new ways of understanding language in society’ (Coupland, 2010: 2). Much has been written by globalization theorists (Castells, 1996; Featherstone, 1995; Giddens, 1990; Hall, 1991; Huntington, 1996; Inda & Rosaldo, 2008; Kraidy, 2002, 2005; Pieterse, 2004; Robertson, 1992; Tomlinson, 1999) on the nature and meaning of globalization, its causes and consequences, and its many contradictions and paradoxes. Indeed, globalization is best thought of as a multi-dimensional process that cuts across various spheres of activity in the realms of economy, politics, culture, technology and so forth that is transforming the world into a complex place – in the way it is imagined, represented and acted on by its inhabitants (Blommaert, 2010: 63). Furthermore, these transformations are so messy and unpredictable that we can only understand globalization as a complex of processes evolving and developing at different levels of scale, scope, speed and intensity, changing the world landscape in a number of ways.

Drawing on our insights from the voluminous literature on globalization, we suggest that the following characteristic elements of globalization